ERISA Compliance FAQs: What Is an ERISA Plan?

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) is a federal law that sets minimum standards for employee benefit plans maintained by private-sector employers. The Department of Labor (DOL), through its Employee Benefits Security Administration (EBSA), enforces most of ERISA's provisions. Violating ERISA can have serious and costly consequences for employers that sponsor welfare benefit plans, either through DOL enforcement actions and penalty assessments or through participant lawsuits.

If an employee benefit plan is exempt from ERISA, the plan's sponsor does not have to comply with certain requirements that are designed to protect plan participants and ensure plan solvency. On the other hand, an ERISA exemption also means that the plan sponsor does not enjoy certain protections afforded to employers under the law. Most significantly, employers that sponsor ERISA plans are generally protected against lawsuits for punitive and other types of damages under state laws with respect to their benefit plans.

This Compliance Overview includes a set of frequently asked questions (FAQs) to help employers determine whether their employee benefits plans are subject to ERISA.

COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

Which Employers Are Subject to ERISA?

ERISA applies to virtually all private-sector employers that maintain welfare benefit plans for their employees, regardless of the size of the employer. This includes corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies, sole proprietorships and nonprofit organizations.

ERISA exempts only two types of employers

Employee benefit plans maintained by governmental employers are exempt from ERISA's requirements. This exemption includes plans maintained by the federal, state or local (for example, a city, county or township) governments.

Church plans are also exempt from ERISA. A church plan is any employee benefit plan established or maintained by a church or by a convention or association of churches that is exempt from tax under Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code (Code), and that has not made an election under Code Section 410(d) to be subject to ERISA.

ERISA's exemption for governmental plans also extends to plans established by an "agency" or "instrumentality" of a federal, state or local governmental entity. Although ERISA does not define these terms, the DOL has issued many written opinions on the scope of ERISA's exemption for governmental plans (for example, DOL Advisory Opinion 2005-01A). In general, the specific facts and circumstances of the relationship between the particular entity and the government must be examined to determine if the entity is a political subdivision, agency or instrumentality that is exempt from ERISA.

ERISA's church plan exemption also includes any plan maintained by a "principal-purpose organization," which is an organization that:

- Is controlled by or associates with a church or a convention or association of churches; and
- Has a principal purpose or function of funding or administering benefits to the employees of the church or convention or association of churches.

The DOL has interpreted this definition as an exemption for plans maintained by employers that are not churches themselves but have church affiliations. The DOL has issued numerous written opinions to various church-affiliated employers, including hospitals, orphanages, schools and old-age homes, advising them that their employee benefit plans are exempt from ERISA as church plans (for example, DOL Advisory Opinion 1994-05A). In 2017, the U.S. Supreme Court confirmed this position by holding that ERISA's church-plan exemption applies to both plans established and maintained by churches and plans maintained by principal-purpose organizations.

Small employers are subject to ERISA's requirements, unless they meet the exemption for governmental employers or churches.

COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

Which Welfare Benefit Plans Are Subject to ERISA?

Many employment plans or programs that provide nonretirement benefits to employees are considered employee welfare benefit plans that are subject to ERISA. To qualify as an ERISA plan, there must be a plan, fund or program that is established by the employer for the purpose of providing ERISA-covered benefits (through the purchase of insurance or otherwise) to participants and their beneficiaries.

ERISA generally applies to the following common employee benefits, regardless of whether they are insured or self-funded:

- Medical, surgical or hospital benefits;
- Dental benefits;
- Vision benefits;
- Prescription drug benefits;
- Health reimbursement arrangements (HRAs);
- Health flexible spending accounts (FSAs);
- Accidental death and dismemberment (AD&D) benefits;
- Group life insurance benefits;
- Death benefits (other than life insurance);
- Wellness programs (when medical care is provided);
- Employee assistance plans (EAPs) (when medical care is provided);
- Disability benefits, both short-term disability and long-term disability, if insured or funded other than as a payroll practice; and
- Disease-specific coverage (for example, cancer policies that provide medical benefits)

Which Welfare Benefit Plans Are Not Subject to ERISA?

Certain welfare benefit plans that would otherwise fall under ERISA have been specifically exempted by DOL regulations. These exemptions include:

- A safe harbor exemption for certain payroll practices; and
- A safe harbor exemption for “voluntary plans.”

In addition to these exemptions, certain benefit arrangements do not fall under ERISA’s definition of a welfare benefit plan.

COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

ERISA generally does NOT apply to the following arrangements:

- Adoption assistance plans;
- Health savings accounts (HSAs)—if the employer’s involvement is limited and employee participation is voluntary;
- Dependent care assistance programs (DCAPs);
- Pet insurance;
- Section 125 premium-only plans (although the plan’s benefit components may be subject to ERISA);
- Health, fitness or exercise club membership—if the program does not offer medical care;
- Financial/retirement planning programs;
- Liability or casualty insurance plans;
- Commuting benefits (that is, transportation allowance, free parking and mass transit passes);
- Professional development classes (unfunded);
- Scholarship programs (unfunded);
- Sporting event tickets or discounts;
- Tuition reimbursement;
- Unemployment compensation provided solely to comply with state law; and
- Workers’ compensation benefits provided solely to comply with state law.

Which Payroll Practices Are Exempt from ERISA Under the DOL’s Safe Harbor?

Payment of Wages

An employer’s payment of compensation for work performed by an employee, including compensation at a rate in excess of the normal rate of compensation for duties under other than ordinary circumstances, does not create an ERISA plan with respect to wages, overtime pay, shift premiums, and holiday or weekend premiums.

Unfunded Sick Pay or Paid Medical Leave Programs

In addition, payment of an employee’s normal compensation, out of the employer’s general assets, on account of periods of time during which the employee is physically or mentally unable to perform his or her duties, or is otherwise absent for medical reasons (such as pregnancy, a physical examination or psychiatric treatment) is a payroll practice that is not subject to ERISA.

These practices may include income replacement, short-term disability, salary continuation or paid medical leave programs.

To fall under the payroll practice exemption, the program must:

- Be unfunded and uninsured;
- Not pay more than an employee’s normal compensation; and
- Cover current employees only (that is, does not cover former employees, retirees or other nonemployees).

COMPLIANCE OVERVIEW

Unfunded Vacation, Holiday, Jury Duty and Similar Pay

Payment of compensation, out of the employer's general assets, for the following time off does not create an ERISA plan:

- Vacations or holidays (including payment of premiums to induce employees to take vacations at a time favorable to the employer for business reasons);
- Active military duty;
- Jury duty or testifying in official proceedings;
- Periods of time when an employee performs little or no productive work while engaged in training (whether or not subsidized in whole or in part by federal, state or local government funds); or
- Sabbatical leave or time off while pursuing further education.

What is a Voluntary Plan that is Exempt from ERISA Under the DOL's Safe Harbor?

The DOL's safe harbor exemption for certain voluntary insurance arrangements generally applies where the full premiums are paid by employees and the employer has minimal involvement. To qualify as a voluntary plan under the DOL's safe harbor, the arrangement must satisfy the following requirements:

- The program is funded by group (or group-type) insurance;
- No contributions are made by the employer or employee organization;
- Employee participation in the program is completely voluntary;
- The sole functions of the employer (or employee organization), with respect to the program, are, without endorsing the program, to permit the insurer to publicize the program to employees or members, to collect premiums through payroll deductions or dues checkoffs and to remit them to the insurer; and
- The employer or employee organization receives no consideration in the form of cash or otherwise in connection with the program, other than reasonable compensation, excluding any profit, for administrative services actually rendered in connection with payroll deductions or dues checkoffs.

The employer's involvement with the plan is the key for determining whether the plan is exempt under the voluntary plan safe harbor. If an employer endorses the plan, it will fall outside of the safe harbor and may be subject to ERISA.

Employer endorsement may include these actions:

- Selecting the insurer;
- Negotiating plan terms or linking coverage to employee status;
- Using the employer's name or associating the plan with other employee benefits;
- Recommending the plan to employees;
- Saying that the plan is subject to ERISA;
- Doing more than making payroll deductions (for example, sending premium notices or assuming liability for premium payments due during grace periods);
- Allowing employees to pay premiums through the employer's Section 125 plan; or
- Assisting employees with claims or disputes.
